From The Back Cover: By Beckisprout_in_Alaska Fishing Alaska's streams, lakes, and salt water is often anything but a placid experience. Sometimes anglers are hapless players in a comedy, ducking fly hooks, dodging competitive bears, and diving in to retrieve runaway fishing poles. You might say it looks like the Keystone Kops at times. As sports editor for the Anchorage Daily News, Lew Freedman has heard stories you wouldn't believe. But who says fishermen are truthful? Here's a collection of Lew's favorites: wacky tales from the water's edge.

Sportswriter Lew Freedman shares a wacky collection of stories from the water's edge: flying fishhooks, thieving bears, and the big ones that didn't get away.

Lew Freedman has captured some of the best and funniest stories the sport has to offer. --Wisconsin Bookwatch
