By Verna R. Byron "The Florida Cowhunters Handbook" added to the already published "The Green Jeep" "Fireside Tales as Told by Florida Cracker Cowboys" is a tribute to an industry "found off the interstate". As concrete, condominiums, asphalt housing developments spread over the state of Florida, much of the land has become "too valuable" to continue farming or ranching and is being sold off to developers. He has captured the true essence of the cracker cowboy and the cattle country in Florida from Okeechobee to Kissimmee, where 1/4 of U.S ranches running over 2500 head of cattle are found. His "dictionary" of cracker terms and stories truly gives the reader many good chuckles, especially if you've "been there-done that"! If Dr. Jones had as many laughs writing this as I did reading it, it's a wonder he was able to complete this work! A must read for any cowboy enthusiast!! Charles W. Byron Jr., DVM of 0 people found the following review helpful. Amazing, funny, and humorous book By C. Thompson I would recommend this book to anyone who enjoys a good laugh and especially who has an understanding of the Florida Cracker culture. I love Howard's brand of humor--it's amazing. He is able to describe these terms with such descriptive adjectives and colorful humorous stories that you can actually feel as if you are there. This book (and also the Green Jeep) is a must read for anyone who loves humor and wants to immerse themselves in the old Florida Cracker life again. It brings back fond memories of my own experience in the Florida Cracker culture 35 years ago! Thank you Howard---I can't wait for your next book!!

There are some phrases and words that are unfamiliar to those outside Florida Cracker Cowboy Country. In this book, Dr. Howard Jones, retired veterinarian, who practiced for 30 years in this area and author of The Green Jeep, seeks to explain some of these terms with the same dry humor common among these special people.

About the Author Howard Selby Jones, Jr. was born in Henderson, Kentucky, and moved to south Florida during his teen years. He was introduced to the Cracker culture on the Williamson Ranch in Okeechobee, Florida. After two years at the University of Florida, he was accepted at Auburn University School of Veterinary Medicine where he gained his Doctorate of Veterinary Medicine. Following a stint in the Veterinary Corps in the United States Air Force and five years in a large/small animal partnership in Sebring, Florida, his teacher's heart brought him back to Auburn where he completed a two-year Dairy Medicine and Surgery Residency while earning his PhD in Ruminant Nutrition in the Department of Animals Sciences. After one year as the Dairy Extension Specialist for the Alabama Cooperative Extension Service, he returned to Sebring and purchased his former practice. And for twenty-four more years, he covered over a fifty mile practice radius which included Highlands, Polk, Hardee and Okeechobee Counties in the heart of his beloved Cracker cattle country. Now retired, Dr. Jones lives in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Western North Carolina with his wife of forty-five years.
