Joost Elffers, Saxton Freymann : Food Play before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Food Play:

Bought as a therapy tool, works as a self-therapy toolBy JMSAmong the most comprehensive "food" books by Saxton Freymann, I bought this to use as a child-therapy tool... i planned to use it for projective storytelling, discussing emotions, initiate discussions, etc., but kids are too distracted by the novelty of "food faces" to actually focus on any real emotional content for themselves. However, I showed it to a colleague (who, incidentally, had been stressed out) and he said, "I feel better already." So rather than use it to facilitate therapy with kids, I use it with my adult substance abuse clients to demonstrate positive emotional experiences can be induced with non-chemical stimuli.I also like to look through it when I need to smile.1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. I. LOVE. This. Book!!!By SydneyNo words at all. No "story". Just photographs. The author takes foods (fruits vegetables, mostly), and carves, cuts and twists them into faces or animals.The expressions are priceless! The effects are amazing - the author gets a simple piece of fruit to look just like an animal. It is a great book to sit with your children and go through, but it is also fun to just go through it yourself!!It happens to be a great teaching tool for some children with autism or ASD. One of the issues that children with autism have is understanding facial expressions. This book is all about the expressions!! I can't say enough good things about this book. I have a copy that I keep for myself, and I have given several as gifts. Definitely worth the price. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Bought for 5 yr old but we all love it! By SurfinSDI had the greeting cards from this same collection. Everyone loved the cute "poses". Couldn't find more cards, but found this awesome book. If anyone reading this can do anything about it, please reissue the cards!!! Thanks!

In 1996 Joost Elffers and Saxton Freymann introduced Play With Your Food, a groundbreaking collection of photographs featuring playfully carved fruits and vegetables. With more than a million copies sold and an award-winning series under their belts, the pair have proven the old adage wrong you really should play with your food. Now, for the first time, Food Play compiles more than 300 of the very best images from a decade of astonishingly imaginative publishing. This compact collection will surprise and delight both fans of the series, and newcomers to the enchanting world of Food Play.
