Janet Graves : FUNNY ROMANCE: Knockout of Love: Romantic Comedy - MMA Bad Boy Fighter and Good Girl (Best EROTIC Stand Alone Short Stories)

before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised FUNNY ROMANCE: Knockout of Love: Romantic Comedy - MMA Bad Boy Fighter and Good Girl (Best EROTIC Stand Alone Short Stories):

0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Minus starsBy CustomerThis was the worst start of a book I have ever read. The first story had so many errors it was hard to get through, but I did and went to the next. This book was advertised as FUNNY ROMANCE and I found myself reading about ABORTED FETUSES. It was very upsetting. So upsetting that I quit reading the whole book. Why and how can this be offered as funny? Terrible writing. Terrible editing.

Ellie is a well-educated, liberal lawyer from a well-to-do family. Her neighbor and best friend of over 15 years', experience a traumatic evening when Ellie's home is broken in to. Alan, not-so-secretly in love with Ellie, calls the cops but quickly comes to her rescue and is able to take down the intruder until police arrive. Feeling helpless, and nervous to be in her own home, Ellie decides she needs to take some self-defense classes that she stumbles upon at the police station. Kyle is the owner of 4 gyms around the Los Angeles area. He is a hard-working conservative who loves his family. He starts to train Ellie in Mixed Martial Arts and it doesn't take long before the two end up becoming something more than Instructor and Student. While neither of their friends approve of the potential relationship, the two continue to get close. After the two cross that line from just friends to lovers, Ellie begins to admit her feelings to herself. The two go to a party for one of Ellie's friends together; only to realize that Kyle and Alan had an altercation in High School that puts Ellie right in the middle of this childhood feud. ----- EXCERPT FROM BOOK Her hands shook slightly as she typed the number into her iPhone. A pleasant, extremely masculine male voice answered after 3 rings, surprising her. At 4 PM on a Saturday any gym would be pretty packed; she had been expecting to leave a voicemail. "Um, hi." She muttered. Then, regaining her usual confidence, "Hi yes, I got your number from a flyer at the police station and was interested in potentially taking some individual self-defense classes." "Absolutely." the man on the line responded. "I have an opening for individual lessons Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays every week from 6-8 PM." "Wow, that's a lot." She replied, momentarily second guessing herself. Maybe she should have thought this through more to see if she was willing to dedicate the amount of time that was clearly necessary. "It is, but it's worth it. Trust me." She could almost hear a smile through the phone. This guy was obviously passionate about his job. "Besides, that's only initially. Once you feel more comfortable and have learned the basics we usually cut back to twice a week, then ultimately only one class a week. You'll also have free range of the workout equipment any other day you please." He continued. "Okay. Count me in." She smiled as she relayed her answer. "Starting this Monday?" She wanted to confirm. "Yep. See you Monday." And he hung up. Funnily enough, she was already feeling less weak and more powerful; she was taking back control of her situation. Ellie had never considered herself a damsel in distress before, but last night had been a huge wake up call. Yes, she had a gun. But she wouldn't always. What if she had been attacked and disarmed? She would have had no knowledge or means to fight off any sort of attacker. AUTHOR'S NOTE: This is a stand-alone story with an HEA, so no cliff-hangers! Story contains mature themes and language, and is intended for 18+ readers only.
