Donald Davis : Going to Grandma's (American Storytelling from August House) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Going to Grandma's (American Storytelling from August House):

Old Man Hawkins was a larger-than-life character among deer hunters, or more precisely among tellers and hearers of tall tales. His self-proclaimed method of hunting deer by holding a mirror in one hand and his rifle in the other pointing backward over a shoulder was, he said, to be fair to the deer. It was a story, Davis tells us, that would occupy his father on the drive to Grandmaf_(tm)s house.
