Why cry when you can laugh (and cry)? Read hundreds of full-color cartoons chronicling the absurdities, the tragedies, and the significance of the horrible, terrible, no-good 2016 presidential election. From the moment Jeb Bush, Hillary Clinton, Bernie Sanders, and the "Republican Clown Car" launched the election season, to the moment the electoral college declared Donald Trump the winner. This book features award-winning editorial cartoons by Darrin Bell, along with election-related comic strips selected from his two newspaper strips, "Candorville" and "Rudy Park."

About the Author Darrin Bell creates political cartoons, as well as the daily newspaper comic strips "Candorville" and "Rudy Park," for the Washington Post Writers Group. His political cartoons were awarded the 2016 Berryman award, and the 2015 Robert F. Kennedy Journalism Award for Editorial Cartooning. He lives in Los Angeles, CA, where he also creates storyboards for film and television, as well as cartoons for the New Yorker and other magazines.
