Alan Gerson : Habeas Circus: Illegal Humor before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Habeas Circus: Illegal Humor:

But the illustrations (original watercolor paintings) are fabulous. I'd buy it just for the art.3 of 3 people found the following review helpful. First, Get This Book, Then Kill All the Lawyers...By A CustomerGerson is an extraordinary artist with a sardonic wit who we discovered at the Lemieux Gallery in New Orleans ([...]) while at Jazz Fest. He apparently used to practice law there before he wised up and applied his considerable talents to the canvas full time. We were delighted to see another Gerson show in New York last summer and met the artist/author. For anyone who loves the legal profession (or loves to hate it), gerson's wickedly charming illustrations and bon mots is perfect. I'm sending this to all my legal beagle friends for the holiday.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Award Winner for Book DesignBy A CustomerThis book has received a Special Recognition for Paperback Cover Design from the 2001 Southern Books Competition. "Elements of playfulness and anger combine to produce a striking result. The concept of treating a serious topic with humor is effectively conveyed." Congratulations to the author, designer Dana Bartelt and NewSouth Books.

With his unique, eye-tickling artwork, Alan Gerson looks at the American justice system with tongue planted firmly in cheek. The humor is sometimes caustic, often critical, and always irreverent, as Gerson makes us realize that the legal system isn't as bad as we thought it was?it's worse. Find out which circus stars file frivolous appeals, who served on Santa's jury, and why nobody wants Satan for a witness. The laughs come quickly in this witty, strikingly illustrated book.

About the Author Alan Gerson, 47, lives in New Orleans, where he was born. A lawyer for five years, he finally decided he'd rather draw the bench than approach it. In between teaching classes at Loyola University, he is a serious painter who is featured in his own art shows.
