We all need to laugh now and then - especially when we're in the midst of a great deal of brain-breaking reading. This book warmed my heart and kept me smiling for days. (Not to mention proving that Christians can have a great sense of humor!)

With irrepressible humor and goodwill, Becky Freeman shares the joys (and occasional shock) of the relationship changes between mothers and daughters. From drinking that first cup of coffee in front of Mom to experiencing the "grief" they gave to her from their own kids, readers will laugh as Becky helps daughters look forward to or remember the first time they repeat "Because I said so!" realize they're their mom's age. recognize their moms are treating them like grown-ups. Join Becky as she shares the incredible and hilarious journey from mother-daughter to friend-friend. And to keep it fair, Becky's mom (Ruth) chimes in to set the record straight and keep her daughter honest!
