Ivan Stang : HIGH WEIRDNESS BY MAIL before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised HIGH WEIRDNESS BY MAIL:

It is an endless list of bizarre fringe organizations and people desperate to get strange opinions out to the masses. It is not only an excellent cultural artifact of how people in the 80s found weird crap in the days before the internet, it is also a thought provoking work where you can look at an address advertising a dog psychic and wonder if that same person is still reading the minds of dogs all these years later.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Book by Stang, Ivan

.com This hysterical hobbyist's guide belongs in every hip library. Coot cat Reverend Ivan Stang, high holy of the Church of the SubGenius, has compiled a bestiary of American creeps and crazies so that you can write to them and receive mail that is weird, horrible, wonderfully absurd, or a combination of all three. Each entry has a paragraph or two and the last known mailing address of some fringe loonies. The book is only current through 1988, though; the only thing wrong with it is that it's high time for an update--with URLs, of course. Let's see ... there are catalogs of perpetual motion machines; brochures from South American flying saucer cults; something called "The Battle Cry of Aggressive Christianity" (Christian, not likely--aggressive, you bet); and bizarre roundups such as "News of the Weird," the Church of Beaver Cleaver, and so on. What makes this book so funny is the author's willingness to list (and ridicule) any group, no matter how repulsive. This means, too, that High Weirdness contains a group to offend everyone; consider yourself warned. In fact, if you aren't offended by some of these groups, you must be pretty offensive yourself. So there.
