

[Download free pdf] Reasons My Kid Is Crying

Reasons My Kid Is Crying

Greg Pembroke

Download PDF / ePub / DOC / audiobook / ebooks*

#419856 in Books Greg Pembroke 2014-04-01 2014-04-01 Original language: English PDF # 1 7.10 x .40 x 6.121, .81 #File Name: 0804139830208 pages Reasons My Kid Is Crying | File size: 73.Mb

Greg Pembroke : Reasons My Kid Is Crying before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Reasons My Kid Is Crying:

74 of 75 people found the following review helpful. Turned out to be wonderful teaching tool By Customer I originally came to the author's blog for entertainment and commiseration with other parents concerning the frustrations of raising a toddler. However, when my 2 1/2 year old son saw me looking at the page, much to my surprise he was captivated. He was dying to know why all these poor babies were crying. We ended up having wonderful conversations about empathy, safety, better ways to express our feelings to get what we want, and what things might be worth crying about. For nearly 6 months my son asked me to see the "crying baby page," so I knew once the book came out we would have to have it. For the last two weeks this has been our bedtime book. We talk about why the mommies and daddies have to keep the baby out of the oven and the dishwasher to keep him safe even if it means he might get upset. We talk about how someone should tell the boy that a fly can't hurt him so he wouldn't be upset. We talk about how people get cranky when they are hungry, or how the little girl should ask for another peach instead of crying that she ate up the first one. We talk about how we should never hurt the dog (or eat his tail). Sometimes I say, "Well, I would cry too if that happened to me," or "I think I would just ask for what I wanted instead of crying." Sometimes I try to get him to see another person's point of view by saying, "I think that Daddy might be sad that his baby doesn't want a picture taken with him." Even though as a frustrated parent I find the book very funny, I'm careful to never laugh or trivialize the babies' feelings in front of my son as he takes their feelings very seriously. For child who is just learning about feelings, empathy, and expressing himself verbally this series has unexpectedly turned out to be an invaluable teaching tool. 13 of 13 people found the following review helpful. Do not miss out on this book! By Graypets I love the Tumblr, I love the Twitter feed. The only advantage they have over this book is that the book, unfortunately, ends. This book is not all entertaining pictures, either. There are short essays throughout that show Greg Pembroke has real sensitivity, depth and talent. I hope for not only sequels to this book, but perhaps more writing as well. Fabulous! 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Perfect Addition to Coffee Table Book Collection By CFrieberg No review is necessary. Those who follow Greg Pembroke's blog will understand how awesome this book is. While my kids are not featured in it, they love to sit with this book and laugh at all of the kids that are crying (when they are guilty of crying over the same reason themselves). It's a great coffee table book for any parent.

A glimpse into the tribulations of parenting that is part documentary, part therapy, and completely hilarious. It all started when busy father Greg Pembroke posted a few pictures online of his three-year-old son, mid-tantrum, alongside the reason his son was crying: He had broken his bit of cheese in half. In Reasons My Kid is Crying, Greg collects together photos sent from parents around the world, documenting the many, completely logical reasons why small children cry. Among them: "I let him play on the grass" . . . "He ran out of toys to throw into his pool" . . . "The neighbor's dog isn't outside". The result is both an affectionate portrait of the universal, baffling logic of toddlers—and a reminder for burned-out parents everywhere that they are not alone.

Praise for ReasonsMySonIsCrying.com One of the Top 8 Favorite Tumblrs by E! Online * The most viral blog on Tumblr in 2013 – Yahoo "Couldn't be more hilarious." –Good Morning America "Reasons My Son Is Crying makes parents weep...with laughter." –Today.com "Totally cute (and totally relatable)." –Mashable About the Author GREG PEMBROKE is the father of two sons (and the husband of one wife) from Rochester, NY. He works part time as radio advertising copywriter three days per week and stays home with his young sons two days per week.