By Robbie Cheadle
I love Judy E Martins poetry. It is so enjoyable and humorous. Judy has a delightful way of turning everyday situations into a real laugh. Her book of poetry is divided into ten chapters, as follows: Family, Festive, Seasons, Women, Ages, Music, Food, Creativity, Miscellaneous and Sex. This book fairly pulses with vitality and enthusiasm for life and I really look forward to reading a few of her uplifting verses at the end of a hard working day. One of my absolute favourite poems is Ode to Cadburys and my favourite verse is as follows:
They have moved across the water
To give their sales a Boost
But the chocolates taste is different
And the bar size is reduced.
What absolute fun!

A delightful collection of Martin's Kentish wit and wisdom. It's the sort of book that you'll find yourself opening at random just to sample whatever chance leads you to, with never a disappointment no matter where you land. I "charged" a star for one nit. The non-standard choice of font was off putting for me. I would recommend the book.

Lighthearted definitely describes Martins Rhymes of the Times. This is a collection of witty poems that I thoroughly enjoyed browsing during my day. No topic is off limit when it comes to Martins humor and charm. You'll find giggles, sighs and guffaws in these pages. A delightful read.

Are you one of those people that barge through life, trying to get through it as best as you can, swimming against the everyday worries and stresses of life? Well, I have found a way to make it much more enjoyable. Don't you think everything sounds better when it rhymes? I certainly do. In fact, I have found that everything from doing the housework to growing older, can sound more positive and less daunting when made into a little ditty. This book is about finding the humour, or raising a smile from the everyday things that we can all relate to in life, and looking at them from a different perspective. Nothing escapes versification; there is even a subject on sex! After all, that is one subject where there is plenty of room for laughter, even if it may not be the right moment!

About the Author
Judy Martin has just turned fifty and has entered a new phase in her life. She recently started work as an Associate Nurse in the community and loves it, finally finding her niche. She has in the past, done everything from serving as a soldier in the Womens Royal Army Corps, to helping manage a kebab shop! Judy has been writing humorous poems since she was a little girl and loves expressing herself through rhyme. She draws her inspiration from everyday events that most of us can relate to, and puts her unique spin on it. Her large family is often her inspiration, as is the weather, the seasons, or even sex; nothing is safe from manipulation into verse! She lives in the beautiful county of Kent with her long-suffering husband Bob, (Mr. Grump), daughter Lucinda (Miss Hap), and not forgetting Roxy, the Cavalier King Charles spaniel.
